"FIGHT OR GIVE"
SLOGAN IN RED
CROSS CAMPAIGN*Men and Women Will Gather
This Evening at Grand Pacific for Finishing Touches*$15,000 AMOUNT FIXED
FOR BURLEIGH COUNTY*Nineteen Teams to Cover City—Women to Conduct House to House Canvass

"Fight or give." That will be the slogan of the Red Cross war relief teams which start out over Burleigh county tomorrow, following a dinner at the Grand Pacific at 6:45 this evening, when the final touches will be put on the campaign. There will be five-minute talks by Dr. Stickney, Bradley Marks, H. P. Goddard and Sam Clark.

Fifteen thousand dollars is the quota of the $100,000,000 assigned to Burleigh county.

Forces Mobilized.

City and county teams have been mobilized and each member is determined that the $15,000 will be reached. More than 1,800 men have registered for war service from Burleigh county. This brings the obligation close home and vitalizes the appeal. Bismarck and the county at large must contribute its share to care for the men who will be drafted from these 1,800. Do you want some other community to shoulder the load? Do you want a stranger to finance the aid and succor your boy will need when, 3,000 miles away, he takes his place in the far flung battle lines, to stem the blow aimed at this country, as well as our allies?

Enthusiasm Intense. Enthusiasm for this war relief fund drive is manifested on all sides. The men who returned from the county districts Saturday stated that the people were determined to assist in raising the $15,000 to take care of "our boys" at the front.

Some voluntary subscriptions have been received already, before the campaign is under full swing.

H. P. Goddard, chairman of the finance committee, is captain of the teams and together with Bradley Marks, chairman of the Bismarck Red Cross chapter, is directing with a corps of able assistants, this big drive for war relief funds. The finance committee directly in charge is composed of the following:

H. P. Goddard, R. C. Battley, J. V. Bell, H. H. Steele, O. N. Dunham and Mrs. V. J. LaRose.

Many Assisting. Valuable assistance is being given by Mrs. F. L. Conklin, secretary of the local chapter, and Rev. Buzzelle, vice president of the chapter, as well as the members of the executive committee, whose names have been published recently in these columns.

The Teams. Bismarck, in common with thousands of other cities in the United States, will make preparations for the active campaign at the dinner this evening. Mr. Goddard announced the following teams today:

Team No. 1, O. N. Dunham and P. C. Remington; No. 2, J. L. Bell and L. E. Odyke; No. 3, William H. Webb, Jr. and O. W. Roberts; No. 4, George N. Keniston and Otto Holta; No. 5, C. L. Young and P. R. Fields; No. 6, F. L. Conklin and Benton Baker; No. 7, F. L. Shuman and J. P. Jackson; No. 8, R. C. Battley and A. W. Lucas; No. 9, J. L. George and Otto Holta; No. 10, H. T. Murphy, H. F. O'Hare; No. 11, G. C. Wachter and L. K. Thompson; No. 12, Dr. Bodenstab and J. C. Anderson; No. 13, F. E. Young and G. F. Dullam; No. 14, Father Hiltner and Dr. Ross; No. 15, Sam Clark and W. A. McDonald; No. 16, J. R. Waters and N. A. Mason; No. 17, H. H. Steele and H. P. Goddard; No. 18, D. T. Owens and S. F. Lambert; No. 19, Lynn Sperry.

County Workers. The following men have charge of the campaign outside of Bismarck: Brittin, P. E. Galloway; Moffit, Valentine Benz, L. L. Rockwood; Driscoll, Geo. Cunningham; M. B. Pinaeth; Sterling, S. T. Park; H. E. Wildfang; McKenzie, P. P. Bliss, S. R. Day, W. I. Watson; Menoken, A. T. Welch; Baldwin, H. C. Higgins, C. W. Streeter, I. M. Capper; Still, W. LaVeen; Regan, A. L. Barnes, A. V. Marcello; Wing, G. A. Hubbell, G. Olgerson, P. C. Evans, H. H. Kerr; Arena, W. B. Heaton, W. M. Scott.

They will be present at the dinner this evening. Saturday afternoon the women representing the federated clubs held a meeting at the Commercial club, to select members to make a house to house campaign. The following women, headed by Mrs. W. C. Taylor, were picked as special teams to do this work and streets assigned to them.

Washington avenue from Main street north, west of Washington and north of Rosser. Mrs. R. H. Thielke. Riverview Addition, south of Rosser and west of Washington avenue, Mrs. Elizabeth Geiermann. Mandan avenue from Main street going south and north, Mrs. Clayton Dalrymple.

$15,000 Is the Mark

You could not see a boy suffering and refuse him aid.

Your heart would go out to him in distress, you would give of anything you have, make any sacrifice, if it would bring him relief.

That is because you could see the poor, piteous body wracked in pain. You would not have to imagine anything. You would know yourself.

Should the fact that he is in France, thousands of miles from home where you cannot see him or hear him call for help, make any difference?

Must we wait until the lists come back and we read the names of boys we knew—fine, strong, manly lads who never again can be reached by our help—before we realize the need? No.

THE CALL IS TO YOU NOW. Burleigh county citizens must give no less than $15,000. Don't wait for someone to ask you. Go yourself to RED CROSS HEADQUARTERS at the Commercial Club and pledge all you can for this great cause.

A committee has gone over a list of citizens and carefully arrived at a fair assessment for each one. In the course of the week most of the people will be reached. Co-operate with the teams in the spirit of the great need which prompts this appeal for funds.

Teams may call upon you. But should they miss you this does not relieve you of the pressing obligation to contribute to the noble cause.

The RED CROSS offers you the richest investment opportunity in the world. It will pay you in dividends greater than gold—tears of appreciation, sighs of relief, comforted souls and bodies, lives saved. Can you buy anything finer?

"HELP SEND ACROSS THE RED CROSS."

SPAIN DEMANDS RADICAL CHANGE
IN GOVERNMENT*Discontent With Existing Methods
Has Been of Long Standing
Among Liberals*FAVORITISM CANKER
BLAMED FOR TROUBLE

Madrid, June 18.—A movement for the radical rebuilding of the whole political edifice in Spain is gaining adherents everywhere. Discontent with existing methods has long been general among the liberals. Internal and external difficulties arising from the war have served to heighten and increase it and it has gained among the other parties. Even former Premier Aaura, leader of the conservatives, agrees that there is ground for dissatisfaction.

Senor Romeo, editor of the Correspondencia de Espana, summed up the general grievance in a forcible article recently. He wrote: "The whole of Spain, with the exception of a thousand families who monopolize the sweets of office, is sick to death of the favoritism which condemns the country to external stagnation and is only waiting for the signal to rise like one man and do away with it forever. Favoritism is the canker which is killing Spain and will put an end to her unless we put an end to it."

At Cordova a number of prominent men, including engineers, university professors, manufacturers, workmen and priests, have published a manifesto, demanding a new political system, totally different from that hitherto existing and the formation of defense committees throughout the country.

SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE BUSY ON WAR TAX BILL

Washington, June 18.—The senate finance committee today resumed its work of revising the war revenue bill with a motion by Senator Penrose for reconsideration of its action in regard to lowering postage rates for newspapers and magazine publications. Indications were that the committee would reconsider its action, and vote to change the tax.

High Cost of Eats
Sends Mandan Cook
To County Bastile

Mandan, N. D., June 18.—The high cost of living is blamed for the downfall of W. J. Curran, cook at the Klondike hotel, who is doing time in the local jail after being fined $50 and five days in jail for the theft of a large quantity of meats and other edibles from the hotel kitchen.

CANNOT TRAIN
DRAFT TROOPS
BY SEPTEMBER*New National Army of 650,000
May Not Be in Camp Before
Middle of October*NO SPECIFIC TIME
SET FOR MOBILIZATION

Washington, June 18.—Unless there are unforeseen developments to hurry construction of the 16 cantonments for training the new national army, the first increment of 650,000 troops will not be in training by September 1, as generally has been supposed, and in fact may not be in training for six weeks thereafter. The war department said today that no specific date had been set for the opening of the camp. Secretary Baker, in a letter referring to the need of men for the harvest, recently spoke of September 1 as the probable date for opening, and pointed out that most of the harvesting would be over by that time.

War department officials had generally fixed September 1 in their minds as the time training would begin. The first unit of officers for the army now being trained in camps, is being turned out in August to make room for the next body. This was arranged on the plan of having the draft complete and troops in camp by September 1.

ROOT COMMISSION INSPECT PALACE

Petrograd, June 18.—The members of the Root commission attended a service in the imperial chapel in the winter palace today and later toured the building, much of which is now being used for a military hospital. Mr. Root and his associates talked with wounded soldiers and nurses occupying the great banquet halls and drawing rooms of the palace. They inspected the paintings and sculptures of the imperial gallery, passing hundreds of peasants, who were being shown through the palace, hitherto closed to the public. The extreme demeracy and orderliness of the Russians was shown by the utter lack of precaution to guard the art treasures of the palace.

Rear Admiral Glennon and his aides will leave Petrograd for Sebastopol, accompanied by Russian officers, to visit the Black Sea fleet.

100 INJURED IN VIENNA EXPLOSION

Vienna, June 18.—It is officially announced that an explosion has occurred in the military munitions depot at Steinfeld, near Innsbruck, 31 miles from Vienna. The statement says that three of the depots have been destroyed thus far and 100 persons are reported injured. Unofficial reports say six persons were killed and 300 wounded in the explosion. Great damage was done to property.

SCIENCE WILL

SAYS CORKY*Author to Spend Time in Aiding Spread of Technical Knowledge*NO MORE ANARCHY IN LAND THAN BEFORE*Half Children of Empire Die, He Says, Before Reaching Age of Five

(By Associated Press.) Petrograd, June 18.—Maxim Gorky, the author, is taking the lead in a widespread movement for political and economic reconstruction of Russia on the basis of universal application of science to practical life. Mr. Gorky, in collaboration with other writers, is starting the "free association for developments and dissemination of the positive sciences."

Since the revolution Mr. Gorky has been participating actively in politics as the founder and editor of the extreme democrat newspaper, "New Life."

As a result of severe work and overstrain, he had a return of his old lung complaint in April, but has recovered. A correspondent today interviewed the writer, who began with the announcement he was abandoning politics and in the future would devote himself to cultural questions.

Lack of Science. "The reason is," he said, "that I have formed the conclusion that the evils from which Russia is suffering have as their first cause our painful backwardness in scientific and technical knowledge. Through that may be traced the present political instability of which you hear so much."

"As regards our internal condition, I advise you not to believe the talk about anarchy too readily. Undoubtedly it exists, but it existed long before the revolution. The fact is, that under the old regime of despotism and falsehood Russia could not develop."

Children Die. "Through lack of science, half of our peasant children die before reaching the age of five. The moujiks cultivate the land so badly that the average yield is half the yield in England or Belgium. City conditions are equally bad. We have no training whatever. Town children are rickety, nervous wrecks. Against such evils we need not sterile dreams, but science, technique, machines, efficiently developed, industry. Soon anarchy will be uprooted by order. Believe me, Russia is not lost. I consider our present troubles transitory and curable by means of the fervent application of the two supreme principles, knowledge and work."

UNION JACK TAKEN UP BUNKER HILL FOR FIRST TIME

Boston, June 18.—The British Union Jack was taken up Bunker Hill for the first time today, commemorating the historic battle of Charleston between the American minute men and the English red coats 142 years ago. It fluttered at the head of the baggage band of the New Brunswick Kilites battalion, 236 Canadian overseas regiment, on its farwell appearance before returning home after a two weeks' recruiting campaign here.

44 AUTOMOBILES TOURED MERCER COUNTY SUNDAY

Golden Valley, N. D., June 18.—Forty-four Golden Valley booster automobiles toured Mercer county Sunday. The parade, over a mile long, was headed by the Golden Valley, 32-piece band. There was a concert and royal reception at Zap, Beulah, Hazen and Stanton, and the tour is ever put across.

PORTUGUESE SOLDIERS FACE FIRST FIRE

Paris, June 18.—Portuguese forces on the western front, having been initiated in the art of modern warfare by progressive stages, have now received their baptism of fire. The Matin says that today they are organized and have proved their worth in exemplary fashion.

Omeme Man Tells Of Thrilling Trip
On Board Mongolia

Omeme, N. D., June 18.—Allison Pope of Omeme, a passenger on the Mongolia, writes from England of his safe arrival there. The Mongolia, he advises, was several times attacked by submarines, and finally in either struck a sub or so thoroughly frightened the German U-boat that it did not again molest the ship. Mr. Pope, whose father and sister reside here, will enter the hospital service in France.

TREASON; RUSSIA
FAVORS ACTION*Duma Votes for Immediate Offensive by Troops—Against
Prolonged Inactivity*WOULD HAVE CONFERENCE
TO REVISE AGREEMENTS*Asks Provision That None of the Signatory Powers May Treat
Individually

Petrograd, via London, June 18.—The duma in secret session has passed a resolution for an immediate offensive by the Russian troops.

The resolution declares a separate peace with Germany or prolonged inactivity on the battle front to be ignominious treason toward Russia's allies.

The announcement last week that the cabinet had decided to suggest a conference of the entente allies for examination of treaties was followed today by the publication of the note sent to the other governments in question. This note suggests a conference to revise the agreements existing among the allies as to war aims, with the exception of the London agreement which provides that none of the signatory powers shall conclude a separate peace.

Only Minor Battles. Little beyond the artillery engagements is taking place on any of the various fronts. On the front in France held by the British, aside from the artillery duels, there have been only minor operations in the nature of raids and a continuation of aerial activity.

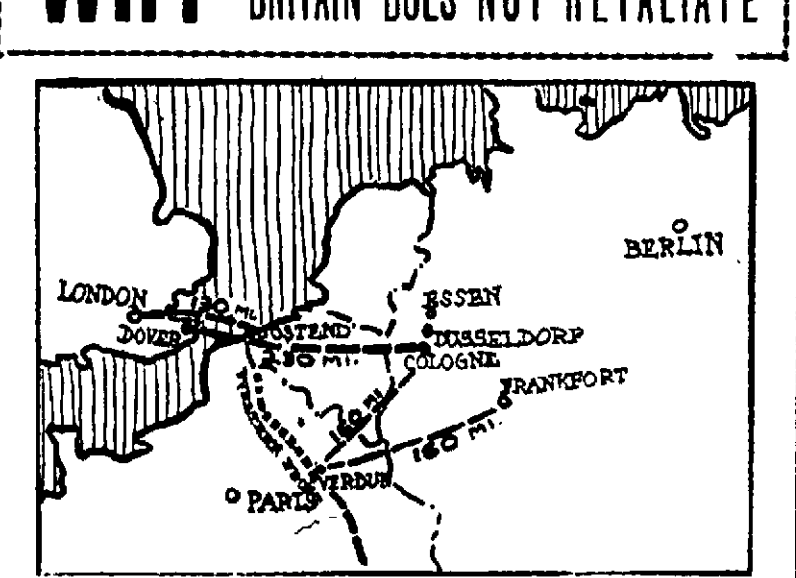

Near Hurbelise the Germans in a night attack seized portions of trenches held by the French, but later were forced to give back most of them in counter attack. Considerable activity continues in Belgium in the regions of Steenstrate and Het Sas.

Allies Capture Towns.

In Macedonia the artillery duels that have been in progress for several weeks are still going on, but the expected infantry attacks have not developed. Meanwhile the entente forces continue to throw their troops into the assault, the occupation of various towns having been accomplished without untoward incident.

Former King Constantine of Greece is reported to have arrived at Messina, Sicily, on his way to Switzerland.

Activity in Russia. Although quiet still prevails on the Russian front, there seemingly is an indication that the allies soon will begin there again. The Russian duma at a secret session has passed a resolution calling for an immediate offensive and declaring that a separate peace with Germany would be treason toward Russia's allies.

WHY GERMAN AIRMEN RAID LONDON
BRITAIN DOES NOT RETALIATE

TO TAKE STEPS. London, June 18.—Replying to questions in the house of commons this afternoon as to whether England would resort to reprisal for German air raids on London, Chancellor Andrew Bonar Law said the government intended to take steps not only for damaging the enemy, but for preventing further raids on England.

By MILTON BRONNER. Washington, June 18.—The object of the German air raids just made over England is to destroy the aerial supremacy of Great Britain and France on the western front, by forcing a large number of the British planes to be called from the fighting front to protect English cities. Such, at least, is the opinion of military authorities here.

It is admitted that in this plan all the advantage lies with the Germans. In the first place it requires only 15 German planes to carry out a raid as destructive as the last one with its toll of 97 dead and 137 injured. They are free to strike any city or any great industrial center that they choose, and no one can possibly predict in advance where the blow will fall.

To protect Great Britain from such raids, on the other hand, thousands of fighting planes would be required, and these can only be procured by withdrawing them from the French front, where every plane is now needed to maintain the supremacy in the air recently won by the Allies.

The "ground great advantage of Germany lies in the fact that it is very much further from any of the Allies' flying bases to any vital spot in Germany than from the German flying bases to London and other big English cities.

GUILTY AS REDENBAUGH

Minneapolis, Minn., June 18.—Frank J. McCool today was sentenced to 30 years in prison, having been convicted of third degree murder in connection with the death of Patrolman Connelly of Minneapolis.

McCool's attorney asked for clemency for his client.

"The jury found the defendant guilty of the lowest degree of murder possible under the law," he said, "thus proving they believed him only partly guilty."

Judge Hale denied the request. "This court," he said, "has no hesitation in saying that he feels this defendant was equally guilty with Redenbaugh in the murder. It was a cold blooded murder, which came as the culmination of a plan to kidnap Connelly and put him out of the way. This prisoner was fortunate to appear before a jury that would lessen the degree of murder charge."

Crowds Greet
Irish Prisoners
Who Were Freed

London, June 18.—Great crowds were in Dublin today to welcome the released Irish prisoners who arrived there, among them being Countess Markievicz. Men with banners escorted the former prisoners to their homes. There was much singing of Irish songs, and a great deal of cheering, but no disorder.

Countess Markievicz led a band of revolutionists which attempted to capture Dublin castle, killing a guard. She was sentenced to death, but her sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment.

8,000 Jews
Leave Palestine

Boston, June 18.—Details of the recent evacuation of Palestine have just been received by the Boston branch of the provisional committee for General Zionist affairs. The cable, in part, says:

Between 8,000 and 9,000 Jews were compelled to leave Jafa. Of these, more than 3,000 are now in lower Galilee, more than 1,000 in Petach Tikvah, the remainder having been dispersed in the colonies of Judea and Samaria. The deaths incidental to the evacuation were due to insufficient nourishment and the hardships of the journey. Jerusalem has not been evacuated.

Speculation*ABDICATION OF KING
RELIEVES ALLIES' FLANK*Every Evidence That Russian Army and Navy Are Becoming More Alert

(By Associated Press.) Developments of importance apparently are impending on the Macedonian front, following the recent clarification of the military situation in Greece, coincident with the abdication of King Constantine.

The most pronounced movement is the withdrawal by the British without pressure of their advance positions east of the Struma river, on the extreme eastern end of the front. Several towns evacuated by them have been occupied by the Bulgarians. Simultaneously comes news of pronounced reconnoitering activities by the entente on the Vardar in the central sector. It has been frequently pointed out by military observers that virtually the only practical route for a successful advance to cut the Balkans and reclaim Serbia is up the Vardar and to cut the railroad lines there.

Offensive by Sarrail. The present activities point to the probabilities of an offensive by General Sarrail in the likely sector—that embracing the Vardar area—is imminent.

An aggressive move, it would seem, has now been made possible by the removal of the menace to the Allies at the rear, which existed as long as Constantine was on the Greek throne, and his pro-German political advisers were in control of the situation.

Russians More Active. Both the Russian army and the Russian navy are giving more evidence of aggressive intents. Recent German and Austrian announcements have instanced increasing activity by the Russian military forces, notably in Volhynia and Galicia, where the great Brusiloff offensive was in full swing at this time a year ago.

The Russian naval arm, also, has been so largely in evidence in Baltic waters that Berlin announces it has been necessary to carry out extensive air raids on Russian bases in this area.

In the Arras battle area the British were subjected to a heavy counter attack on the new positions they won last Thursday east of Monchy le Bruin. They held fast to the main points, but had to fall back from some positions they had established farther in advance.

MEDINA MAN MAY DIE FROM TARGET PRACTICE INJURY

Jamestown, N. D., June 18.—Carl Hoglund of Medina was shot and probably fatally wounded yesterday while enjoying target practice with friends on the outskirts of Medina. A bullet from a .22 rifle glanced from the target at which the men were shooting, entering his abdomen. He was rushed to Parkview hospital here, but slight hopes are held for his recovery.

ONLY ONE ARREST TO DATE FOR NOT BEING REGISTERED

Fargo, N. D., June 18.—While warrants have been issued for the arrest of approximately 50 for failure to register, federal officials admitted today that only one arrest had been made. They would not give the man's name, saying he gave an affidavit to show he was not the. Four arrests are expected to follow for threats against the life of the president.

One deputy went into town with 12 warrants, all complaints but one proving groundless.

WOMAN MINISTER TAKES UP DUTY IN RUSSIA

Petrograd, June 18.—In a workman's blouse and leather skirt, Countess Sophie Panin yesterday appeared to take up the post of assistant minister of social tutelage, a department of state, with the function of administering the social and charitable institutions and also the care of children.

The countess is the world's first woman minister. She is 47 years of age and was married to the Associated Press, she declared her staff of officials will consist for the most part of women.

PROPHET'S FAME
COULD NOT AVERT
KNIFE OF SYRIAN
Son of the Orient Given Five Years in Penitentiary for Slaying Comrade

Cavalier, N. D., June 18.—Joe Scion was given five years in district court for the killing of a fellow Syrian. Ali Scion, the slayer testified, told with a tale of Mahomet on his lips. Although the killing Scion claimed, was accidental, he nevertheless sought to conceal the tragedy by dumping the goods out of his pedler's trunk and stuffing dead Ali in their place and driving on his way. Striding on top of the trunk, which contained all that was mortal of Ali, he stopped wayfarers whom he met on the road to ask them if they had seen his partner. Finally he dropped the trunk and its sorry contents in the brush at the roadside, where it was found, buried in the snow, some time later. The two Scions were cousins, reared together in Syria and had long operated in this section of North Dakota.

The slaying took place in a deserted trail on Christmas eve last. Scion's statement on the stand, told in halting and picturesque English, with the gestures and idiom of the orient, was intensely dramatic. He protested throughout the trial that the shooting was accidental; that the gun was discharged while he was attempting to empty the chamber, and that fear as to his fate in a strange country led him to attempt to conceal the body instead of immediately notifying the authorities of the accident. He particularly dreaded, he declared, the vengeance of his own people, of the nearby Syrian colony.

Adopted Tomorrow

Mandan, N. D., June 18.—Mandan folk tomorrow will arise an hour earlier than has been their wont, and Mandan bedtimes this evening will be advanced accordingly. In response to petition from hundreds of citizens, H. L. Henke, president of the city commission, has proclaimed the adoption of central time in lieu of mountain time tomorrow. President J. M. Hannaford of the Northern Pacific has instructed shop employees to adopt the same time tomorrow. The time will still change at Mandan, however, for trains west bound, which will leave an hour earlier than their arrival.

U.S. HOLDS PIVOTAL POSITION IN WAR

Whole Campaign Against the Teutons Hinges on Action of America.

WHAT ALLIES EXPECT OF US

Look to This Country for Men, Money and Supplies—Renewed Activity in East Hope of Generals in West.

By ARTHUR S. DRAPER.
(In the New York Tribune.)

London.—America now holds the pivotal position in the war. This fact will become more strikingly apparent in the next few months.

America today is like a football player called into the game late in the second half, when the rival teams, battered and tired, are still struggling desperately, but are practically deadlocked. The European allies feel that they are near enough to the German goal for America to boot the ball over the crossbar.

America does not yet appreciate how much dependence the allies are placing on her, nor the difficulties ahead. Henceforth the whole campaign of the grand allies will revolve around America—and Russia. But the Russian leaders today are frank to admit that for the present at least Russia will follow the sympathetic lead of republican America.

What Allies Expect.

France is looking to America to give her assistance in the line of battle and to support her financially. Italy looks for money. Serbia hopes to get Slavs from America to re-enforce her battered army. Belgium asks little, but will be devoutly grateful for anything. England, strong and confident, is overjoyed with what her new partner already has done.

America can and will soon become the dominating factor of the war. She is fresh; her resources are unlimited; she has a definite policy. Whether or not America wants the limelight, it will be thrust upon her.

She can become the leader of the world or the scapegoat of the grand alliance. It is for her to choose, but upon what she does in the next few months will depend her position in the world for generations.

Some weeks ago Premier Lloyd George appealed to America for "ships, ships, ships." Now his appeal, if he dared speak frankly, would be for speed. It is all very well to talk of beating Germany in 1918 or 1919, but it leaves people cold. The European statesmen know that the people will no longer be satisfied with anything but hard facts. Within the central powers unrest has been bottled up for so long that it is becoming more daring, and even the Prussian government fears revolution. The Lloyd George government has no smooth path ahead of it. In every belligerent the same feeling exists.

That is why it is essential for America to make speed.

Still Determined to Win.

I must make it perfectly clear that there is no weakening of the determination of the allies, no desire for "peace without victory." But there is a real dependence on America to assist in obtaining a peace which, in the words of General Smuts, would establish "security in the future" for all peoples, large or small.

But that peace cannot be secured without the full and speedy co-operation of America. I state this, not on my own authority, but on that of men who know every detail of the situation as it exists today. Labor, Ireland, liquor and food are only a few of the questions which this government must settle while at the same time it continues its pressure on the enemy.

Around the British premier is a group of men who are stern and uncompromising—Milner, Curzon, Carson—but they have reached a critical juncture, and will make or break the government by their decisions in the next few weeks.

KING PROUD OF NEW ARMY

Roumanian Force in Action Again Is Better Disciplined and Equipped Than Ever Before.

Petrograd—Reorganized, better disciplined and better equipped, the Roumanian army is in action again. Ferdinand's ravished kingdom is far different from the disorganized host that fled eastward last year before the overwhelming hordes of Von Falkenhayn and Von Mackensen.

Throughout the winter months and late into the spring Russian, British and French officers worked over the Roumanian troops, drilling them in the new fighting tactics which this, the greatest of all wars, has brought out.

The new Roumanian army is the pride of King Ferdinand's eye and great things are expected from it this coming summer.

Bottineau, N. D., June 18.—A change in sentiment toward the league is reported locally as a result of the debate between Senator L. P. Sandstrom and Representative L. L. Stair, stand-patter and leaguer, respectively, on the merits of house bill No. 43, the league's proposed new state constitution, which fell by the wayside in the last session of legislature. Senator Sandstrom is said to have had so much the best of the argument that the eyes of many farmers who had previously heard but one side of the argument, were opened. Representative Stair was the league's floor leader in the house of the Fifteenth assembly.

WERNER IN FAST GAME

The Halliday baseball team defeated Werner on the Werner grounds by a score of 5 to 0. The Halliday team found Smoky Jones, the Werner (writer, for 10 hits. Farmer and Ellis constituted the battery for Halliday. Farmer striking out 16 men, while Jones struck out six. Bases on balls off Farmer 1, off Jones 1. Farmer was found was five hits.

MARGUERITE CLARK.

Famous Players Star in Thrilling Romantic Drama of Past and Present.

"Silks and Satins," the delightfully charming romance in which little Marguerite Clark is being starred by the Famous Players Film company on the Paramount program, is a reflection of every youthful dream that was ever dreamed. For in this thrilling breath from another day, which is the feature at the Bismarck theatre this week, dainty little Miss Clark is transported to the romantic days of the past through the medium of the old diary which she finds on the eve of her intended wedding to Felix Breton.

Felicite does not care for young Breton—he is her father's choice, and the heart of the little maid is breaking for big Jack Desmond, whose engaging smile and care-free behavior have won her love, but incurred the wrath of her father.

In support of Miss Clark, who plays Felicite in both parts of the play, there appear such well known players as Thomas Holding, Vernon Steel, Clarence Handysides, W. A. Williams and Fayette Perry.

No Feed for Game.

Lord Davenport, the British food controller, in an interview at which he announced a number of new regulations, observed, with regard to the order prohibiting the feeding of game with grain required for food or stock-rearing: "Pheasant rearing and indulgences of that kind, which were all right in happier days, are indulgences we do not wish to see continued, and this is our method of bringing them to an end. I do not suggest that there is much of this going on. We mean to be on the right side. The broods will keep themselves alive in the woods, if a man allows them to go in the woods. I do not say we are giving the farmer liberty to shoot them, but that is what we mean in so many words. We mean the order to be observed, and if there are any abuses proceeding from it we shall take further and stronger measures to put it in force."

Mildly Censuring Him.

"My goodness," she says, with a pretty scowl, "I think a girl would feel dreadfully foolish if she proposed to a man."

"I should think so, too," replies the diffident youth.

"But, then, I suppose there are some girls who are just simply compelled to do the proposing," she sighs.

After an hour's consideration of that remark he realizes what she really means.—Woman's World.

Words of Inspiration.

I am determined to sacrifice estate, ease, health, applause, and even life, to the sacred calls of my country.—James Ogle.

One Exception.

"While the farmers are deploring the shortage of help we have a vast army of able-bodied men performing useless tasks," stated Professor Pate. "Take the solicitors who come to our doors with labor-saving utensils that absolutely must be in every household in the land, who take our cherished tin-types and return enlarged crayon copies of the same that look like nobody on earth or in the waters under the earth, and so forth. If such futile trades were abolished these industrial slackers might be persuaded to help feed the nation in this crisis. I have purposely refrained from including in the list the suave gent who offers orate literary works to the few people in each community who are of sufficient culture to appreciate them. In order to remain normal and keep well we are obliged to have somebody to hate, and for that purpose the book agent is ideal."—Kansas City Star.

CITY IS HIGH IN THE AIR

Gwallor, Capital of Native Indian
State, Built on Top of Rock 800
Feet in Height.

South of Agra in the hot half-desert country of central India a great rock looms out of the flat plain. The sides of the butte, as it would be called in the Rocky Mountain country, rise sheer for about 800 feet, and the area of its surface is large enough to support a city. It is about two miles long by a quarter of a mile in breadth. This is Gwallor, the capital of a native Indian state under British domination, and once one of the strongest military positions in India.

Two other cities are instantly called to mind by the sight of Gwallor—one, the neighbor city of Chitor, perched on its rock to the southwest, the other the Pueblo Indian village of Acoma, just half way around the world in the New Mexico desert. All three of them were picked for their military value, and all three have outlived their usefulness.

A narrow winding road cut out of the rock leads from the plain to the citadel above. At the top of the road is the beautiful painted palace, its exterior tiled over with ornamented, highly glazed tiles of a workmanship whose secret has been lost. Color and design are each perfect after their fashion, making the palace one of the sights of India. Inside, alas, it is not a sight but a smell. The bats, the multitudinous Indian bats, have taken possession; they swarm here as in no other place for hundreds of miles around, and no creature with a nose can remain to admire the interior of the painted palace.

SEA WATER FOUND IN LAYERS

Lower Strata Contain Less Dissolved Oxygen and This Has Influence on Fish Life.

Land animals breathe in oxygen with the air. Fish get it, but less of it, of course, dissolved in water. Messrs. J. W. Sale and W. W. Skinner reported in a paper presented at a meeting of the American Chemical society that the lower layers of certain tidal waters contained less dissolved oxygen than the upper layers.

They show this to be due to the greater specific gravity of the under layers compared to those above them. In other words, the water is found in strata, according to its weight, and this prevents an up-and-down circulation. When we recognize that the oxygen is also depleted by other agencies there is sometimes found to be very little of it in the lower layers. The depletion is greatest in September.

Tidal waves and storms bring precipitates which with the depletion of oxygen have a great influence on fish life.

Substitute for Olive Oil.

The production of sim-sim of sesamum (Sesamum indicum) seed is an important agricultural endeavor on the East coast and in the interior lake districts of Africa. The total exportation of this product from the protectorates of British East Africa and Uganda during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1915, (the last available detailed statistics), amounted to 3,134,320 pounds, valued at $102,824, of which amount about 20 per cent was produced in Uganda and the remainder on the coastal plain of British East Africa.

In that year 28 per cent of these exports went to India, 22 per cent to Aden, 18 per cent to Italy, 15 per cent to Italian Somaliland, and most of the balance to Zanzibar and France. In former years Germany was the largest purchaser of this product, which is a substitute for olive oil. These figures, it should be understood, do not represent the total production of sim-sim within the territory mentioned inasmuch as a very large amount is consumed locally.

Something in the Way.

"What are you going to do?" asked the sweet young thing.

"I'm going to kiss you," said the man.

"But don't you see I have a chap-eron with me?"

"Yes, but she's deaf, isn't she?"

"But she's not blind, and, besides, she has a very jealous nature."

Farmer Stew.

Pound flour into both sides of a round steak, using as much as the meat will take up. This may be done with a meat pounder or with the edge of a heavy plate. Fry in drippings, butter or other fat in a Scotch bowl, or if more convenient in an ordinary iron kettle or a frying pan; then add water enough to cover it. Cover the dish very tightly so that the steam cannot escape and allow the meat to simmer for two hours or until it is tender. One advantage of this dish is that ordinarily it is ready to serve when the meat is done as the gravy is already thickened. However, if a large amount of fat is used in the frying, the gravy may not be thick enough and must be blended with flour.

A WORD TO YOU

FROM the beginning of the world until the present time, news has been gathered, decimated and scattered. First in the hieroglyphic character when people would be gathered together and the news read them, from off a tablet.

That would be a poor way today, wouldn't it? What progress has been made--how intellectually strong the inhabitants of the world have grown since then.

Through the agency of the telephone, the telegraph and national news gathering associations the principal papers the world over, are able to give their readers the gist of the important news happenings only a few hours after its taking place.

In Northwest Dakota, Montana and eastern Wyoming, the Tribune has thousands of readers who are daily being kept posted on the important news of the world. The Associate Press leased wire service, supplies this paper with the principal movements of the vast thousands who are at death's grip in the old world; of Major General Pershing's movements; what Uncle Sam is doing; Red Cross activities-- in fact there in no general news of interest the Tribune does not print. Local and state matters are written and edited by a large staff of well-paid employees. In fact, if its news worth reading, it will be found in the columns of the Tribune.

Nearly five thousand people are paying for and receiving the Tribune every week-day of the year. More new names are being added to our subscription list every month and that practically unsolicited. Is this not evidence enough that people residing on the Missouri Slope like the Tribune, it's policies and methods.

SPLENDID UNITED STATES FLEET PUTS TO SEA, READY TO MINUTE

Gouverneur Morris Visits a Fleet of American Warships "Somewhere in American Waters" and Gives a Vivid Picture of Life Aboard a Fighting Ship—Men and Ships Fit to Meet Any Foe.

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.
(International News Staff Correspondent.)
Somewhere Near America.—On Friday, May 11, I received permission to visit a fleet of United States warships, was told where to find it, how to reach it, and that until Thursday, the 24th of May, I must not convey to the newspapers which I represent any of the impressions that it should make upon me, nor all of the impressions until the end of the war.

It may be of interest to the public to know that the fleet which I visited was somewhere in American waters, and that, backed by the proper authority, it may be reached in several ways. More than this I am not permitted to say, nor may I give the composition of the fleet, nor the names of the ships composing it, nor of any of the officers governing those ships.

I must deal in impossibilities. If I saw faults or virtues I must not particularize. In short, I must tell about the fleet without telling about it, and give a general impression with most of the impressions left out.

Battleship a Man.
I shall deal, then rather with the humanities of the fleet than with its mechanics; with its aspects rather than its potentialities. And with one particular ship rather than with many.

It has been said that a modern battleship is a machine. It is not. It is a man. His eyes may no longer have the vision of youth, but he sees through a hundred pairs, whose vision is twenty-twenty magnified many diameters by lenses exquisitely adjusted; his hands may not be large or strong, but they have within them almost a god's power to destroy.

It is as if his brain had multiplied his eyes and made telescopes of them, had increased his body to an enormous and beautiful abomination, displacing 30,000 tons, and had lengthened his arms and strengthened his hands until they could reach out clear away over the rim of the world, and there smash and crush and tear and kill.

It was twenty years since I had set foot on a battleship. There was something familiar about him and something strange. It was like meeting a promising friend of your boyhood after he had grown into a man. (I will not be she warships, nor be her them. They are men.) He had grown older, wiser, grayer, stronger, broader, taller and swifter. And though neither of us had forgotten the best, nor the worst of those things which we had once had in common, he eyed me askance, and I felt embarrassed and shy.

Warship Now More Kind.
The officer of the deck spoke to a seaman. And by the tone of the voice I knew that friend battleship had not only grown stronger and greater, but so sure of himself that he could afford to be more courteous and more kind. Things happened. A meal came and went. One threw dice for the cigars. One lost. One listened and one talked, and one began to associate in the back of one's head this face with the rightful name of its owner and that insignia with the office of its wearer.

No two faces of the uniformed men around the long, narrow table of the ward room mess were alike. But they were all fine, clean-cut faces of rigorously educated men in the pink of physical condition. Like all travelers, they were broad-minded, and like all men who have been brought up among true values, they were without affectation of any kind.

I have said that a battleship is a man. It is not. It is a city.

That it is a walled city, defended by terrible cannon, every man knows. So I shall not here and now speak of the magic eyes with which it sees the approach of the enemy, the thick armor with which it repels his blows, nor of the terrible cannon with which it returns them.

The government is the flagship. The admirals are the governors of states and the captains and commanders are the mayors of cities and towns. It is a complete civilization, a floating country, to which the devotion of its seamen and firemen is as necessary as that of its admirals, captains and commanders.

But to return to our city. It differs from land cities in that it recognizes neither night nor day. There are more people awake in the daytime than at night; but the city's eyes are never closed. And during each minute of his waking hours each citizen knows what he must do, or what he may do.

Our Ships at Sea.
One day I learned that on the following morning we were "going out." Close to my room was one of the steel tubes through which the anchor chains slide, and very early I was awakened by a sound that was as if, on a dozen adjoining alleys, giants were howling and making ten-strikes. A little later I felt the first revolutions of the engines. I did not need to look at my watch. The captain had said that we were going out at 5:15, and I had learned by now that when the navy says 5:15, it means 5:15 to the second.

I breakfasted at eight and went on deck. There was nothing to be seen but water and blue sky, a close-up battleship which resembled ours as one pea resembles another, and several far-off battleships that looked as if they had been cut out of cardboard.

All the time that we were out I kept away from charts and compasses. Only the sun by day and the stars by night gave me any notion of our whereabouts.

It was a restful feeling.

We were moving at the rate of 15 knots an hour. There was nothing vague about this. That was our speed to the inch and second. It was also the leisurely rate maintained by the close-up battleship, and his distance from us at the end of a given hour was within inches of what it had been at the beginning.

A marvel of battleships is the precision with which they move and keep their distances and mind their manners. It is only less marvelous than the mobility of their turrets and their great guns. A turret revolves without a sound. It may be turned so fast that if you got in the way the business end of the gun would knock your head off, or it may be turned so slowly that to the eye it is not turning at all.

That day I attached myself to a group of boys who were learning to be a gun crew and who that afternoon would hear a gun fired for the first time in their lives, would fire one and would try to hit a target. Although I did none of the hard work, I think that I shared as an equal in all their mental processes and I know that I suffered just as much as they did when, after rehearsals and dress rehearsals, the gun finally and very suddenly and horribly went off.

Learning to Shoot.
First, they were taught how to load. For this business a short dummy gun with a genuine brush, screw box and plug is provided. I am not now speaking of great turret guns, but of lesser guns, whose bark, however, is much higher pitched and less tolerable to the ears, eyes, nose, spleen, liver, toes, spine and scalp. I am speaking of a gun which has the highest muzzle velocity of any gun in the world, and much the most disagreeable voice.

This is how you load it: The plug man with his right hand swings a lever, the plug swings out of the breech or screw box, and to one side. With his left hand the plugman slips into its chamber in the plug a primer (possibly a .44-caliber blank cartridge) to replace the exploded one which has been automatically extracted. Then the plugman swings his lever again and closes the breech of the gun.

That is what the plugman does. While he is doing it five other men are doing other things of equal importance. The moment the gun is open the trayman slips into the form box a metal contrivance which protects its fine gears and edges from being injured by the sharp point of the heavy wheel, and which guides the shell itself into the bore of the gun.

The brush being open and the tray in place, the first shellman with all his might hurls into the opening the shell that he has been holding, the first powderman hurls after it a bag of powder, and then even as the tray comes out and the breech closes, the first shellman has turned, without using his feet, and received from the second shellman a fresh shell, and the first powderman has turned and received from the second powderman a fresh bag of powder.

That is how the gun is loaded. It is a matter of seconds. In practice the shell and the powder bag (omission by censor?) to keys the junction of two lines that cross each other at a right angle on the exact center of the bull's-eye. A third pointer does the same thing with another pair of crossed lines, but the wheel elevates the muzzle of the gun end or depresses it. And of all the men in the compartment of that particular gun he is the luckiest, for he is the only one who knows the exact moment when the bang is coming. He causes it by pressing a button. At any moment while a certain buzzer is buzzing, and the crossed lines are on the bull's-eye, he is at liberty to fire the gun.

Blast of the Guns.
We steamed slowly down the range a number of times, and all the compartment guns on our side of the ship swung slowly from left to right, as the pointers kept the crossed lines on the bull's-eye. And we all got a line because we knew that each practice run brought us nearer to that real run when the awful blasts that we anticipated would have to be endured somehow.

We turned and steamed slowly toward the range. We were in the compartment, the gun crew and the officer in charge, myself and twenty or thirty feeding seamen, who were there to pick up what they could by eye and ear.

I have never in one time or place seen so many forced smiles. One of them was mine. We had been served with absorbent cotton and had plugged our ears. The cotton made men's voices sound numb and far-off. It had no effect whatever upon the voice of the cannon.

The steel doors of the compartment had been closed and locked. There was no escape.

The range came over the speaking tube. The first pointer repeated it and made an adjustment. There came a voice, even through cotton, a bellowing voice: "Coming on the range! Coming on the range!" There was a dead silence. Then low, clear and insistent, like the deadly rattle of our most infamous native snake, the buzzer.

I had forgotten about the gun in the next compartment. I shall never forget it again. It went off.

Lifted by the concussion.

I was sitting at the moment and my feet were swinging clear of the deck. I had nothing to jump into. But I rose in the air and came down. Then our gun went. The flash was brighter than sunlight. It was of an intolerable brightness, and all but intolerable was the bang that went with it. The assault was less upon the body than upon the soul. My ears did not suffer at all.

I went out to see how many shots were fired. I did not get used to it. I know that, for not once did I see the gun recoil and go back into place. Try as I would, that white, hot, deafening flash shut my eyes tight for me.

I watched a second run from the bridge. It was pleasanter. The bangsticks were even farther off and you could see the tall, white splashes of the ricocheting shells. I got so that I could keep my eyes open.

I have said that a battleship is a man. I have said that it is a city. It is neither. It is a romance. I recall searchlights that searched the heavens and the face of the waters, that crossed and crisscrossed; the stately calls of the bugles and the sea-salt mists of things. Have you lived in Arcadia? Well, I have lived in the "Junior Officers' Country."

I remember a night of firing of shells that gave off fire so that you could watch the long, lovely curves of their flights; and of searchlights which spoke to each other as easily and as freely as a man speaks to a man.

But what is best in our navy is not the machines, nor the drives, nor the controls, nor any of the death-dealing or life-saving appliances. It is the spirit of these men who, through discipline and self-sacrifice, have learned to find the true values of life and the true meaning of that flag for which at any moment they are ready to lay down their lives.

I speak not only of admirals and captains, of wardroom officers and junior officers, but of the boatswain's mate and the enlisted men.

OFFERS HOME FOR HOSPITAL

Mrs. Margaret Sauer of Tompkinsville, Staten Island, has offered her house to the government for a Red Cross hospital and hospital as a nurse.

Mrs. Sauer came to Manhattan the other day, and at the ferry entrance at the Battery asked a policeman to direct her to someone whom she could offer her services and her property. She told him that her husband had volunteered in the navy, and she did not feel like allowing herself to be outdone by him. Mrs. Sauer was referred to Col. Jefferson R. Kane of the American National Red Cross society and she immediately wrote a long letter to him.

The house in which Mr. and Mrs. Sauer live and which she has offered to convert into a hospital, has a 30-foot front and is nearly double that in depth, and has grounds running back to the next street. Its rooms are large, light and airy, and there is a large cupola on top resembling the upper part of a lighthouse with large windows all around, and commanding a view of New York harbor. Mr. and Mrs. Sauer are both Germans and have a twelve-year-old daughter living at Dresden, Saxony.

CHANCES OF BEING DRAFTED FIGURED OUT BY GARDNER

By GILSON GARDNER.
Washington, D. C., June 18.—Now that we have registered for selective service, what next?

This question is in the minds of about 10,000,000 young men and their 30,000,000 relatives.

The answer in some of its details will be delayed for several days. It is contained in regulations now being worked out by Provost Marshal General Crowder and it must have the final approval of the secretary of war and the president.

Some of the questions, however, can be answered. For instance, how are the men to be chosen? What are the chances of being selected by lottery and by exemption boards?

In round numbers a million and a half names will be taken by lot from the ten million registered names. The chances are about one in seven and a half of being selected in this lottery. Then will follow exemptions on the ground of occupation, dependent relatives or physical defects. This will cut the number down to 500,000, so that the chance is one in three of being selected from the list chosen by lot.

Will married men be excused? At this writing this question is unanswered. It may be covered by the regulations which will before long be published. Probably it will be left largely to the judgment of the local exemption boards.

Will sons with dependent mothers be excused? Again the answer is to be found in the regulations and the judgment of the local exemption boards.

Broadly speaking, it may be said that those having dependent relatives will be excused. Not all, however, will be excused. They are more likely to be excused, however, if their occupation is important to industry, as, for instance, if they are in a mechanical trade or farming.

If it should happen that the man with a dependent relative be a lawyer or have no regular profession he might still be selected on the theory that the $20 a month he paid him as a soldier would go farther toward supporting his dependent mother than casual earnings in industry or his profession.

It is expected that about one man in three will measure up to the physical requirements. These requirements will necessarily be relaxed from the severe tests applied to the regular army and will come nearer to those applied to the state militia.

If it should happen that exemptions for occupation, physical defects and dependent relatives reduced the number in any community below the number required from that community another drawing would be made from the registration list and new candidates would appear before the exemption boards.

These exemption boards will be in many cases the same officials who did the registering. It is not necessary, however, that they be the same officials. Nominations for exemption board duty are now being sent to the president and by him forwarded to the war department, where they are investigated to discover their qualifications to serve on such boards.

Appeal is allowed from the decision of exemption boards and one of the big jobs now faced by the war department is the creation of these boards of appeal, one in each federal judicial district. Judicial districts are quite large and such appeal boards will be very busy after the exemption boards have done their work, hearing cases brought to them on appeal.

It is not necessary to have a lawyer to make this appeal. The purpose is to have everything informal. If a candidate feels that he is not being fairly dealt with by his local exemption board and that he has a proper ground to be excused he may come before the appeal board and tell his story.

The work of selecting from the registered men is expected to occupy nearly two months. By that time the government will have a roster of a half million or more able-bodied and more or less foot-loose young men. These young men will not be called until the cantonment barracks are ready for them. This will not be before September 1, according to the present prospect.

It will take from 60 to 90 days to build these cantonment cities, but when they are ready the men will be ordered to assemble and will be put under the command of officers now being trained in the various camps of the officers' reserve corps. These officers will teach the 500,000 rookies the first principles of soldiering.

Pay will begin for each man from the time he gets orders to report or takes the formal oath as a soldier. It will begin whether he actually is ordered to camp or begins drilling or remains at home. He will be issued his uniform and shoes and when he has put them on he will resemble in all respects a soldier in the national guard or regular army.

There is nothing distinctive about the uniform of the selective service army unless a button on the collar be used to designate as the militia and regulars are designated.

In assembling and organizing the men an effort will be made to hold localities together. The boys from Chicago, for instance, will not be mixed up with those from St. Louis or New York, although they may be if the war department later decides to mix them. The law directs that so far as it may be practicable men from the same communities be kept together.

Men in the selective service army will be eligible to officers' commands, and it is announced that the third series of officers' camps will be made up of men chosen from the selected soldiers.

The second camp is to be August 27 and the third will probably come in October or November.

In official circles it is privately admitted that the chief purpose of this selective service army is for the defense of this country. Much has been said and written about sending men to the trenches in France.

Men are going to France now and it will not be long before General Pershing has a couple of divisions there, but it probably will be a long time before the men now about to begin their training will see active service of any kind.

This does not mean that America is not to take its full part in the war. It merely means that one of the most important tasks this country faces is the preparation of a large reserve army, mobilized, equipped and trained to be used, if necessary, to defend this country from foreign aggression.

As much as we would like to send large bodies of troops abroad, the shortage of transports makes this an almost impossible task in the near future. Feeding the people in France and England is already a tremendous burden which must be shared at once by the United States, and every man sent over there from the United States is another man to be fed, clothed, armed and transported by the workers at home.

Selective service men who will be disappointed if they do not see active fighting at once will do well to enlist in the navy, the marine corps or even the regulars.

All of these will go before the selective service army. This army may in the end all go. That is for the future to determine.

ready for them. This will not be before September 1, according to the present prospect.

It will take from 60 to 90 days to build these cantonment cities, but when they are ready the men will be ordered to assemble and will be put under the command of officers now being trained in the various camps of the officers' reserve corps. These officers will teach the 500,000 rookies the first principles of soldiering.

Pay will begin for each man from the time he gets orders to report or takes the formal oath as a soldier. It will begin whether he actually is ordered to camp or begins drilling or remains at home. He will be issued his uniform and shoes and when he has put them on he will resemble in all respects a soldier in the national guard or regular army.

There is nothing distinctive about the uniform of the selective service army unless a button on the collar be used to designate as the militia and regulars are designated.

In assembling and organizing the men an effort will be made to hold localities together. The boys from Chicago, for instance, will not be mixed up with those from St. Louis or New York, although they may be if the war department later decides to mix them. The law directs that so far as it may be practicable men from the same communities be kept together.

Men in the selective service army will be eligible to officers' commands, and it is announced that the third series of officers' camps will be made up of men chosen from the selected soldiers.

The second camp is to be August 27 and the third will probably come in October or November.

In official circles it is privately admitted that the chief purpose of this selective service army is for the defense of this country. Much has been said and written about sending men to the trenches in France.

Men are going to France now and it will not be long before General Pershing has a couple of divisions there, but it probably will be a long time before the men now about to begin their training will see active service of any kind.

This does not mean that America is not to take its full part in the war. It merely means that one of the most important tasks this country faces is the preparation of a large reserve army, mobilized, equipped and trained to be used, if necessary, to defend this country from foreign aggression.

As much as we would like to send large bodies of troops abroad, the shortage of transports makes this an almost impossible task in the near future. Capital city women responded heartily to the call of Mrs. W. C. Taylor, local chairman of the government service department, for assistants in the campaign for funds for the National Red Cross society.

At the called meeting Saturday afternoon in Commercial club rooms, Mrs. Taylor named captains for the various districts to be canvassed this week. The women will be guests at the dinner this evening at the Grand Pacific, given by the men in charge of the campaign.

At noon each day the teams in the business district will meet at luncheon, compare notes and discuss matters pertinent to the campaign.

Features are planned for the various days. The band will appear at least once and arrangements are being made for the soldiers on duty to parade in order to arouse enthusiasm. Probably a soldier will be assigned to each team. The Salvation Army will participate in the drive, too. Captain Murphy has not announced his plans, but the members of the army are vitally interested in the success of the campaign.

Bunker Hill Day.
Several of the ministers yesterday referred to the campaign. Sunday was the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill and furnished a patriotic setting for the prelude to the Red Cross campaign.

Every dollar contributed to the Red Cross fund of $100,000,000 will be a blow at Germany, and a help to our allies. The people of Bismarck have a great opportunity to strike a blow for liberty by giving to the Red Cross liberally.

Just remember this admonition: "The army and navy will represent the will of the people, but the Red Cross represents the American heart."

Mandan, N. D., June 18.—Charles Westernman, the Teutonic Terror of New Salem, proved easy picking here for Billy Ryan of St. Paul, who

NOTHING DEFINITE.

There are many rumors afloat as to the part Fort Lincoln will play in the mobilization of the troops. That the government has some plans for the use of the post seems certain. In the absence of official notice, however, the Tribune has refrained from giving too much prominence to mere reports.

As yet no training camp has been authorized at Fort Lincoln. There are 300 soldiers quartered there now and preparations are being made to care for more. Tribune readers can rest assured as soon as there is anything tangible and the information is properly authorized by the war department, complete announcement will be made in these columns.

TOWNLEY CHALLENGED.

Justice Robinson. Nonpartisan league candidate for the supreme bench, the man who received more votes than any league candidate with the exception of Frazier, takes issue with Townley in his Saturday night letter.

On financing the war, Justice Robinson says:

"In financing this war there is no reason to confiscate the property of the rich or to do anything in violation of the spirit or the letter of the constitution. Congress has ample power to declare war and to provide for carrying on the war and to issue treasury notes, good for duties on imports and all debts, public and private, and in that way to save interest on bonds. And still the issue of bonds is a just and proper means of financing the war, and in time the Liberty bonds will sell at a premium."

Of course Robinson is right and Townley wrong.

IMPORTANT NEWS.

Those who study prisons and try to find out why men get there will be interested in this news from New York city.

Out of 1,600 men of military age registered on June 5 in penal institutions of that city less than five per cent were physically fit for service.

In Blackwell's island prison not one was fit for the army. Everyone was a physical discard.

A great many persons who have studied such things much will say that perhaps the physical condition of these young men may be the chief reason for their presence in prison.

And most of us feel quite sure that fine, healthy bodies and normal minds are most likely to keep their owners out of prison.

It is with some satisfaction that we reflect upon the fact that this war will do a great deal to make human bodies stronger and healthier—and to that extent make prisons useless.

A HAPPY ENDING.

Every so often some sad-eyed theatrical critic lets out a wail over the fact that the public has lost its taste for tragedy.

"This decadent age," writes his weeping pen, "an age of blatant business men and pampered women who refuse to look life in the face. Because for the nonce they are well fed and well clothed and reasonably content, they fancy the tragic has disappeared from earth. Those few of us by whom artistic values are appreciated can but hope for a future that will not demand invariably a happy ending."

O, poor benighted theatrical critic, that future will never come.

Your public is wiser than you. While you have been fawning over the viewpoint of an outgrown past, your public has been getting knowledge and what's even better, wisdom. The world of upstanding men and women is coming to know that tragedy is after all only comedy in the making, that somehow things will shape themselves happily, that they must, that they do.

Euripides could have let out a terrific roar of tragedy over the death of the hero, tempted to slake his thirst at the forbidden fountain, drinks—and dies. But somehow it's difficult for a modern to tear his hair and cry to the gods when typhoid fever springs from a polluted well. Fate and tragedy go by the boards and the well is filled up before heroes have time to be tempted.

Insist, folk, on a happy ending.

NO PEACE BEFORE VICTORY.

In his Flag Day address at Washington, last Thursday, President Wilson stated the American case against Germany more forcefully and more logically than he or anyone else has stated it before.

It is to be hoped that everyone who even to himself has questioned the righteousness of our cause and the necessity which compelled us to enter the world war, read the president's masterly presentation of the facts.

More than any utterance which the President has made concerning the war, either before or since we got into it, this Flag Day speech jealously with facts.

The facts cannot be repeated too often, in view of the subtle efforts which the German agents in this country, renegade congressmen, and pacifist dreamers are making to poison public sentiment against the war and handicap the government in its industrial and military preparations.

By renegade congressmen we refer to those men who are abusing their postal franking privilege by spreading broadcast throughout the country copies of the pro-German speeches they made in Congress before the war was declared, or in their attempts to defeat the compulsory military service law.

The President's words ring out clear and true above the fog of all these pro-German sophistries and pacifist fallacies.

"The military masters of Germany denied us the right to be neutral." That is the President's major premise, and no firmer foundation could have been laid for the terrible indictment of the German military atrocity which followed.

It is well that all of us, especially those of us who are faint-hearted or inclined to doubt the wisdom of the policies which culminated in our declaration of war against Germany, be reminded from time to time that our war with Germany was not of our choosing, but was forced upon us; that it could not have been avoided except with dishonor and the loss of self-respect.

"It is plain enough how we were forced into the war," said the President. "The extraordinary insults and aggressions of the Imperial German government left us no self-respecting choice but to take up arms in defense of our rights as a free people and of our honor as a sovereign government. The military masters of Germany denied us the right to be neutral. They filled our unsuspecting communities with vicious spies and conspirators, and sought to corrupt the opinion of our people in their own behalf. When they found that they could not do that, their agents diligently spread sedition amongst us and sought to draw our own citizens from their allegiance, and some of these agents were men connected with the German government itself here in our capital. They sought by violence to destroy our industries and arrest our commerce. They tried to incite Mexico to take up arms against us and to draw Japan into a hostile alliance with her, and that, not by indirectness, but by direct suggestion from the foreign office in Berlin."

"They impudently denied us the use of the high seas, and repeatedly executed their threat that they would send to their death any of our people who ventured to approach the coasts of Europe."

"And many of our own people were corrupted. Men began to look upon their own neighbors with suspicion and to wonder in their hot resentment and surprise whether there was any community in which hostile intrigue did not lurk. What great nation in such circumstances would not have taken up arms?"

"Much as we had desired peace, it was denied us, and not of our own choice. This flag under which we serve would have been dishonored had we withheld our hand."

That is our moral justification for now being at war with Germany, but as the President said, it is only part of the story.

The other part is concerned with Germany's ambition for world domination, the first step toward which was to be the welding of all the central European states into a great empire controlled by German militarism, which would hang like the sword of Damocles over the free democracies of the world.

The President points out in words what will probably be a great shock to those who are hypnotizing themselves into the belief that Germany is all but defeated, that the Germans have actually carried the greater part of that plan into execution: "From Hamburg to the Persian gulf the net is spread."

And now, having accomplished practically the purpose for which they set the world on fire, the Germans want peace.

The President says in effect that there can be no peace until the Germans are defeated and their dream of world domination, based upon what they have already won, is shattered.

There is no suggestion of "peace without victory" in the President's address, and there can be no such thought in the mind of any other American who appreciates the full meaning of the German ambition and menace.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

Courage is found not only on battlefields. Courage is found wherever there is need for courage. Always human nature seems to respond to the demands made upon it.

Hearken to the courage of this little town—Mattoon, Ill.

Mattoon was in the recent tornado area. One side of the little place was swept as clean as the deck of a warship stripped for action. Scores of houses were wiped away. Sixty-four have died.

Ruin and death, desolation and broken hopes—all in the path of a swift, lashing blast of twisting wind. But Mattoon is not mourning. Mattoon is not downhearted. Mattoon is not moaning for help. Mattoon is not doing anything you would expect a town so sorely stricken to do.

Mattoon is just going along, caring for its stricken families, helping them to their feet, clearing its wreckage and getting a new start.

Here is courage, fine, upstanding courage in this little town in middle Illinois.

There's no bewailing fate—just looking ahead, fighting the way out of a bad job.

Human nature is about the most wonderful thing in the world. And it is a mighty inspiring thing to contemplate in the midst of a torn-up world.

Burling county over-subscribed its quota of the Liberty Bonds. Special praise is due to the bankers of this county, who handled the campaign so ably.

Three million, North Dakota's probable subscription to the Liberty Loan, is an excellent showing, when it is considered that the farmers have been heavy borrowers this spring, in order to put in as big crops as possible. North Dakota, despite the socialist creators, is patriotic and ready to support the government in this crisis.

"Fight, Farm or Fork Over"—one of the slogans in the East. Red Cross week will give those a chance to "fork over" who are not farming or will not be called upon to fight.

WHY GERMAN AIRMEN RAID LONDON

Suppose the British airplanes concentrate on Ostend, what would happen? Nothing, except that the flying base would be moved to some other point along the coast. The Germans can move their flying base, but the British cannot move London.

American "Frightfulness"

If Great Britain should decide to retaliate by dropping bombs on some important German city, she has two choices: To start her planes from British territory and strike some of Germany's great industrial cities, such as Dusseldorf and Essen, or to start from flying bases back of the French front and hit one of the two nearest German cities of any consequence, Cologne and Frankfurt.

From Dover, England's nearest point, to Dusseldorf and Essen, however, is more than 230 miles, nearly half over German territory, where the fleet of raiding planes would be continually attacked by German fighting machines and anti-aircraft guns.

Similarly, while it is only 160 miles from Verdun to Frankfurt, which is well within the flying range of the British machines, all this distance is over German territory and the German planes are continually on watch.

What makes the German raiders serious is not the damage and loss of life they cause, for more people are killed at the front every hour than German air raiders have succeeded in killing in all their attempts.

The danger to the British lies in the possibility that so great a panic will be created among the people at home that they will make an overwhelming demand on the government that enough British airplanes be withdrawn from the front to protect British cities.

Even the withdrawal of 100 airplanes from the French front would be serious, and any larger number would almost certainly end the Allies' supremacy in the air.

In the opinion of military authorities this would be almost fatal to the Allies, for it would mean that the Germans would have all the advantage of knowing by aerial observation the exact location of the allied trenches and batteries and the movements of troops.

Germany, supreme in the air, would be able to renew the offensive and seriously threaten the weak spots in the allied front.

The only effective answer to the German air raids over England is for the Allies to keep every airplane they have on the western front and make it so hot for the Germans they will not even be able to spare 15 machines for raiding purposes.

The complete success of this plan requires more planes than the Allies now have. And that is why the Allies are anxious to see the United States get a big airplane building program under way as soon as possible.

To Trenches

It is over! My first visit to Jack after his marriage. My first visit, and if I have my way, the last. Dear! Dear! Could one wonder if my dazed state as I left "Dove's Nest," aroused the suspicions of the policeman at the corner? Could one wonder if I made tracks for the nearest hotel and gulped down a large brandy and soda?

"You must come and see us, old man, directly we get settled," Jack had said. "Pussy—I mean Florrie—says you're the first of my pals to be invited. She's always had a fancy for you."

The contrariness of women! At Jack's wedding I had been in a particularly bad humor. For one thing, I detest weddings; for another, Swiper, the scratch player at St. Bede's, had invited me to have a round on his course. As everyone knows, St. Bede's is one of the swaggers links, and it isn't everyone that Swiper will play with. To make matters more annoying, it turned out just one of those perfect September days that seem sent on purpose for golf. And to be compelled to decline such an outing for a wedding, Ugh!

And so—in spite of my scowls—Pussy (Pussy, indeed!) had taken to me. By-the-by, Tabby—I mean Pussy—had a sister. She played the part of bridesmaid at the ceremony—one of those bunny-brained, bird-eyed creatures who bobble and babble until their victims are reduced to a state bordering on idiocy.

The love birds had nested in one of those offensive outrages against good taste erected by the jerry-builder and advertised as "desirable residences." It formed one of a pair of doll-like boxes, bespattered with colored pebbles stuck in cement, while the tenants had the advantage of peeping at the outside world through narrow slits that served as windows.

Jack himself opened the door. His greeting was of the overdone, effusive kind, common to the man who receives a friend in his own house for the first time.

"Awful jolly glad to see you, old chap. Come in. Let me take your hat and coat. Florrie's in the kitchen giving the girl a lift with the dinner. You've no idea what a job it is getting meals! This is the third in six weeks!"

So, he was beginning to find it out already! I could scarcely bide a glance of pity. "Florrie! The last time we met it was Pussy. What would it be next?"

From the smell of burning that came from the kitchen I foresaw that I was let in for a young wife's elementary attempt at something in the culinary line that was beyond her powers.

This surmise proved painfully correct. As Jack and I were smoking a cigarette in a small box of a room he called his "den," the Pussy-Florrie creature made an abrupt entry, showing a heated complexion, a tragic manner, and a strong inclination to fall in Jack's arms and weep on his shoulder.

"Why what's the matter, wee one?" he asked, throwing away his cigarette (one of my best brand, too) and has tending to meet her.

"It's—it's the omelette," the "wee one" sobbed. "I'm sure I did all this cooking, book said, and it's turned out awful."

"There, there, chickabiddy, don't trouble! Rob here won't mind, will you, Bob, old sport?"

The idiot was patting her back and stroking her hand. I had made a pretense of being absorbed in a photograph of the "chickabiddy" that had a prominent place on the mantelpiece. You know the type of photo? It is that particular one they all have taken when they have secured the captive. It is not until then that the eager expression of the unsatisfied huntress is replaced by the offensive smirk of triumph.

I suppose I said the right thing. I don't know. She was gushing and bubbling in a way that beat Tennyson's brook into its. "Was I sure I shouldn't mind if the dinner wasn't quite what it should be?" "So good of me to give up my club for them." "Afraid I must find it very dull"—and lots more of that kind of poppycock.

The dinner showed me that it was a distinct misfortune to be the first friend they had entertained in this manner. Of the dishes it will be kinder to say nothing. Jack made a dismal attempt to carry the affair off with a string of idiotic jokes, causing his "chickabiddy, wee one" to appeal to me if I didn't think him a silly boy?

In the interludes between the acts she manufactured bread pellets to throw at him. He retaliated in like fashion. The exhibition showed me to what depths of folly the newly married can sink!

With every dish came profuse apologies from the amateur cook. Certainly these apologies were necessary. Most of the food was simply uneatable, and I found the biscuits and cheese the most wholesome fare.

The nauseous repast being over, we made a move to the "den" for coffee and cigarettes. Of course, Mousie

(this was another name that came out over dinner) had to light Jack's for him. She sat on the arm of his chair, and struck the match on the sole of her slipper. Also she had just a little puff—a puff and a giggle. Also she asked me if I didn't think her a "naughty girl?" Tut, tut!

She called Jack "Yum-yum;" and then, evidently forgetful of my presence, she commenced to play with his hair, and once—yes, I was not mistaken—she kissed the top of his head. I had noticed some time ago that he was going prematurely bald. Now I know the cause of it. His features, by the way, showed the smug, self-satisfied expression of the man who receives a daily surfeit of kisses and adulation.

Just as I was guessing, what the thoughtful look on her infantile face meant, she gave me the cue:

"I had a letter from my sister Poppy yesterday, Mr. Green," she babbled. "She was asking after you. Don't you feel complimented?"

A cold shiver ran down my spine, but I managed to mumble a word or two.

"You remember her?" she persisted, with all a woman's tactlessness in pursuing a subject distasteful to the person addressed.

"Of course he does," Jack chimed in, grinning clownishly. "I had my eye on him at the wedding."

"She's coming to stay with me," the "chickabiddy" went on. "I hope you'll come over and see us then. You must come on a Sunday to tea."

Good heavens! What a request. Tea on a Sunday! The day I like to reserve for a four-ball match on my favorite course. The creature little knew what she was asking!

Having started on Poppy, she found the theme inexhaustible. Apparently the world did not hold another treasure like Poppy. Poppy was so good-tempered. Poppy was such a cook. Poppy was—oh dear, my brain reeled with Poppy.

A fortnight later I found the following note on my breakfast table:

"Dove's Nest, 23d January, 1916.

"Dear Mr. Green: My sister Poppy has arrived and we would be delighted if you would come to tea next Sunday. Be sure to come early. Yours Sincerely, Florrie Bell."

"P. S.—Poppy hopes you haven't forgotten her."

That settled it. I may as well admit that this note carried more weight with me than all the recruiting posters I had ever read.

At any rate, one is safe from this sort of thing in the trenches.—J. W. Mayall in Grit.

Perfection Salad.

One envelope of gelatin, one pint of boiling water, one cupful of finely shredded cabbage, the juice of one lemon, one-half cupful sugar, two cupfuls celery cut into small pieces, two sweet red peppers cut up finely, one teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful each of cold water and mild vinegar. The method of making is as follows: The gelatin is soaked in the cold water for five minutes, then the vinegar, boiling water, salt, sugar and lemon juice is brought to a boil, poured over the soaked gelatin and the whole strained. When beginning to set the other ingredients are added and the entire mixture put into a mold to chill. When ready to serve the salad is topped with mayonnaise.

Auxiliary Makes Preliminary Plans for Big Feed for Soldiers

Preliminary plans were made Saturday at a meeting of the woman's auxiliary to Co. A, for the big feed for the soldiers stationed at Fort Lincoln, on Independence Day.

The feed will be served in the chapel of the Presbyterian church and it is planned to make it one of the biggest affairs ever attempted in behalf of the boys.

The auxiliary is receiving the support of all the patriotic men and women of the city in this great undertaking. Over 300 men are now stationed at the Fort and by July 4, about 450 soldiers are expected. To feed this number will take the co-operation of the general public.

The meeting Saturday was most enthusiastic and many offers of support were given the women by the fraternal orders and other societies. Cities, which the various companies represent will be asked to assist.

Mrs. J. P. Dunn was named chairman of the reception committee, with Mrs. A. P. Lenhart, Mrs. Peter Reid and Mrs. Robert Orr, assistants. The chairman of the other committees are Dining room, Mrs. F. L. Shuman; so. Mailing, Mrs. Henry Murphy; music, Mrs. J. A. Larson and Mrs. J. P. French.

O'Connor's Orchestra to Play.

The O'Connor orchestra has offered their services for the day and in addition will play for the benefit dance which will be held in Patterson hall Thursday evening. It is expected that the dancing party Thursday evening will be the best patronized of any given here for some time. A bevy of young girls will sell tickets. The committee in charge of the dance is asking that patriotic girls of the city to offer their services in selling tickets for the dance, as the fund realized in this way will be used towards buying the dinner. Girls desiring to aid in this work should communicate with Mrs. Donald McPhee, phone 132L.

Foley Red Cross Benefit To Be Well Patronized

MME. PETROVA AT ORPHEUM TONIGHT

"What Was Secret of First Woman?" Petrova Play Answers Question.

"What was the secret of the first woman?" This all-important question is answered in the Metro-Popular plays and players production, "The Secret of Eve," which will be seen at the Orpheum theater tonight only with the gifted Mme. Petrova as the star. Perry Volkoff directed this five part Metro wonderplay, which is from the pen of Aaron Hoffman, author of many successes.

"The Secret of Eve" shows how in every period of the world's history, men and women have occupied their minds with the fevered pursuit after selfish happiness, and the secret Eve Brandon discovers is—what? See the play and find the answer. "The Secret of Eve" is a vital, absorbing photo to play, full of dramatic incident. Added to this it has true spiritual uplift.

Nature Smiles on Malaga.

Malaga is perhaps the oldest of Spanish cities. Certainly she is in many ways the fairest of them all. If ever there was a lotus land, it is here. The rich earth is fairly bursting with fertility, hidden under a wealth of semi-tropical vegetation, with here and there the green vine hills that bear the grapes for which Malaga is known all over the world. There are flowers, too, great, gaudy blooms, that go with the South sea appearance of the aloe and palmettoes and palms. In a word, Malaga is a city where nature smiles. Sometimes a year will go by there without seven cloudy days.

New Idea of Primitive Man.

A new idea of primitive man was put forward by an Irish professor recently. He states that the direct ancestors of primitive man never went on all-fours, had lived in trees, and, by climbing up and down the trunks, cultivated the upright habit of the human race. He points out that the forelimb was never used only as a support for the body. It seems quite credible, however, that they may have gone on three legs, using one as a hand when required, and this might account for the general use of the right hand in man.

What is the first secret a woman ever kept? See Mme. Petrova, Orpheum tonight.

North Dakota people get the BEST canned goods in the world as well as producing the best wheat and many other food products.

Our pure food laws are the best known and too seldom we realize the benefits we derive from this law in the quality of goods sold over the counters of North Dakota stores.

Then the majority of the packers are honest and conscientious. This insures good brands. But of all the good brands such as Minneopa, Waldorf, Armour, Libby's and many others that we carry we are of the opinion that none excel and that but few equal the FORT SNELLING brand. (And just now Fort Snelling is in the mouths of everyone and—well it should be.)

From this time on we will make a specialty of canned goods bearing the Fort Snelling brand.

Examine the test by quality weight and measure Fort Snelling tomatoes. While the price is not lowest yet we claim that this tomato is the best for the money that we sell. The cans are larger and fuller and the meat more solid than that of any other brand in our store.

Per can ..... 30c

FORT SNELLING BRAND CANNED GOODS

Corn, Fancy, two cans ..... 45c
Peas Extra Quality, per can ..... 25c
String Beans, best, two cans ..... 45c
Peaches, Lemon Cling, very fine, per can ..... 35c
Green Gage Plums, per can ..... 35c
Apricots, per can ..... 35c
Pine Apple, extra choice ..... 35c

Other goods of this brand in proportion.

Every can guaranteed and while not the lowest in price when compared with other brands it is the most economical in money to say nothing of the satisfaction in taste in having the very best put up.

In order to introduce these brands quickly we will give a discount of 10 per cent on all cash orders for these goods purchased until July 15th and advise our friends to buy in case lots as prices of canned goods will be high anyway and this offer is a real money saver to say nothing of the satisfaction from extra quality.

Third Basemen Not Born; Have to Make 'Em

Frank Baker and "Red" Smith, only third basemen in the major leagues who broke in as third sackers. Diagram shows territory which infielders have to cover, indicating that shortstop must handle three chances to third baseman's two and second baseman eight chances to third baseman's five. Diagram also shows why ball usually is harder hit to third baseman as he must get it from 63 to 99 feet from the plate, while the other infielders rarely come as close as 90 feet and usually play about 110 feet from the batter. The ground ball, of course, constantly loses velocity.

By PAUL PURMAN.

Third basemen are made, no born. It's the only position on the ball field where natural ability for the job is not the primary asset.

Most third basemen will agree to this and their judgments will be backed up by managers, who have to figure out where they are going to get men to fill in at the hot corner.

To back up the theory it is of interest to know that of 18 third basemen in the two major leagues, only two broke into the game as third sackers. The rest were detoured to the corner after seasoning at second or short.

Frank Baker and J. Carlisle (Red) Smith of the Braves are the only undiluted third basemen in the two leagues.

The natural question is—Why? So I inquired around among managers and find that a third baseman is made not born, and a good brainy shortstop is the best thing to make him of.

There's not a good shortstop in the league that wouldn't make a good third baseman, comments Hughie Jennings, who made a cracking good corner man out of Oscar Vitt, a second baseman. "But there are plenty of third basemen who wouldn't make good shortstops. The third baseman must have a quick throwing arm and must be a quick thinker, but he does not have to be a wonder on covering ground, while a shortstop who can't cover half the diamond is better off back in the bushes."

SPORT CHATTER

Jack Dillon has enlisted in the navy instead of the army because he fears rheumatism. Most of these fighters who didn't enlist never even thought about rheumatism.

Billy Sunday has done nine holes in 50. Wonder what Billy says when he shows one off the fairway.

Too Much Competition.
"Now where do you want your speech to come?" "Put me on before the delivery is served. Two hundred people eating celery in unison make it very difficult to be heard."

WHERE THE CRIME OCCURRED

Court Decided That Heaven Had No Particular Relation to the Case on Trial.

Even remote cobwebs, callous to the ordinary flow of legal oratory, suffered a severe jolt in their nooks in the District of Columbia Supreme court building, when a certain dark-skinned emulor of Demosthenes delivered one of his $25 speeches to a jury, relates the Washington Times.

Be it understood in passing that this Afro-American member of the district bar is known to have three set addresses, each of which he agreed to rid himself of for the acquittal of his client for a stipulated price. Now the $25 type of oratory is his best, the other two being of the $10 and $15 species. It was the highest priced address that was being delivered on the occasion in question.

John Doe, negro, was charged with stabbing "a friend." The evidence was all taken and it behooved the Ethiopean Demosthenes, representing John, to impress not only John, but numerous others in the courtroom, who, to use legal terminology, might be placed in the category of "prospective clients."

"When man took Father Time by the forelock and started to meander with him down the halls of Eternity," vociferously began the negro attorney. You could have heard a pin drop.

And then without further mention of the evidence against his client the perspiring orator soared into the higher realms and started a dissertation about the angels and archangels. Older habits of the court realized that the defendant at the bar had paid a $25 fee to his counsel and anticipated a half hour of irrelevant epigrams and verbiage. But not so the court.

"Leave heaven and get back to Annecolia," the court facetiously suggested. "There's where this crime happened."

Now every one is wondering whether the $25 address is being revised.

EASTER LILY FROM BERMUDE

Most of Bulbs Have Come From Island Gardens but They Are Now Being Grown in United States.

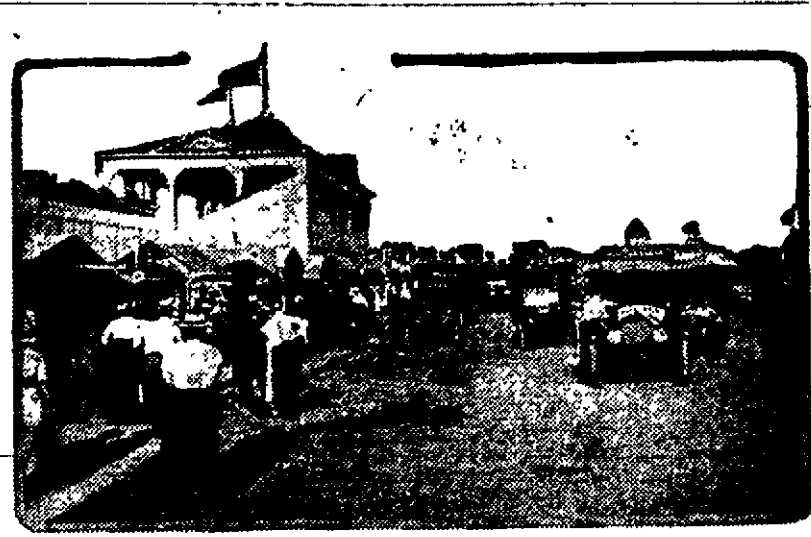

The Easter lily, the accepted floral emblem of that church festival, was introduced into this country about fifty years ago from Bermuda. The little group of islands have sent us millions of bulbs and received millions of American dollars in return. The large eastern cities buy hundreds of thousands of bulbs annually, costing in the neighborhood of $100 per 1,000.

Of late years some disease has attacked the bulbs, and on this account, and by way of developing our own possibilities, experiments in the culture of Lilium longiflorum, the botanical name of the Easter lily, have been made, which prove that in sections of Florida, Mississippi, Washington, Oregon and California it can be grown with perfect success. Thus, it is pointed out, we are making ourselves independent in the way of beauty as well as in matters of greater utility and commercial importance.

Rheumatism Superstitions.
It is when it comes to rheumatism that old superstitions come most definitely to the fore, and there are scores of cures and preventives which have come down through the centuries. One of these which the Belgians have introduced to the fighting men at the front is the wearing of a strip of catkin beneath the coat. According to the Belgians, this makes you immune from both rheumatism and gout, and with the trenches deep with mud and icy water, the average soldier, whether in France or England, is only too glad to "take a chance" on any sort of preventive, and it is said that scores of domestic pussy cats have been offered up as a sort of sacrifice to provide whole regiments with the coveted strip of fur. The fad has spread to England, where "catkin" bands are now sold, but so far America has been content with the theory that the wearing of a steel ring, or the carrying of a potato in the pocket, would keep off the dread aching of joints and muscles.

Great Help.
"My children are very fastidious about their eating. Sometimes I envy the mother birds."
"Why so? They have to work very hard to feed their young."
"Yes, but there's no kicking about this and that. The youngsters don't know what they are going to have for dinner until it is half way down their throats."

Loyalty.
When any part of an organization spends any part of its time criticizing and knocking the rest of the organization, the whole intent and purpose of that firm will suffer.—The Enthusiast.

FINE SPEED EVENTS AT INTERSTATE FAIR

Six Full Days of Good Sport Are Promised for All Racing Fans July 23 to 28.

Director W. H. Doyle, in charge of the speed department, maintains that this year's fair will see one of the finest speed programs ever offered to the lovers of the harness racing game in North Dakota. Four thousand dollars have been hung up in purses in the different events and from the way inquiries are coming in it seems more probable that one of the greatest aggregations of noted horsemen and horses will be in attendance at the big fair, July 23-28 at Fargo. The "Famous Fargo Track" is in mid-season trim at the present time and will be in better shape than it has ever been before and undoubtedly the track record will be broken at this meeting. Nearly thirty horses are already in the stables on the grounds and working out every day, which in itself is an assurance of splendid races. The program is as follows:

Sport Gossip

St. Joseph, Mo., June 18.—The Stymie, an obstacle in putting which has cost many golf matches, will not hamper contestants in the seventeenth annual tournament of the Trans-Mississippi Golf association which begins here today, according to J. E. Fennell of Kansas City, a member of the board of directors.

Although a meeting of the directors was called on Sunday night, Mr. Fennell said that the question already virtually had been decided upon and that the official body would follow the example set by the Western Golf association which recently abolished the stymie.

Mr. Fennell also announced that the rule providing a penalty when the ball is lost on the fairway probably would be eliminated by the directors in the Missouri state tournament held at St. Louis recently one of the semi-finalists lost his match when a ball, which had been perfectly driven, rolled into a stake hole in fair territory.

It is believed that at least 150 devotees of the Scottish pastime will be off today in the qualifying round of 28 holes over the difficult course of the St. Joseph Country Club. Among the entrants are Harry Legg of Minneapolis, present trans-Mississippi champion; Jimmy Mannion of St. Louis, Missouri state champion; Robert W. Hodge of Kansas City, 1916 winner of the Missouri honor, who did not defend his title this year; Alden F. Swift of Chicago, formerly of St. Joseph, winner of numerous midwest tournaments, and a host of other well known golfers from St. Paul, Memphis, Omaha, Sioux City and other central western cities. Proceeds of this year's meeting will be devoted to a patriotic cause.

St. Louis, Mo., June 18.—The 1917 national outdoor track and field championships of the Amateur Athletic union, scheduled to be held here late this summer, will, in all probability, be called off.

Thomas Watts, president of the Western A. A. U., under whose auspices the games were to be decided, practically has decided that the contests would be lacking in title class as to make the holding of the meet useless for championship purposes. So many athletes have enlisted for military service, he said, that the games have been robbed of their usual attractiveness.

Watts said that he might attempt to interest the Red Cross in financing the affair so that whatever profits might be made could be turned over to war relief funds.

Chicago, June 18.—Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond, Ind., middleweight, is returning to this country after a year's campaign in Australian rings. Clabby advised his father that he was anxious to engage in matches with the best of the 160 pounders.

Cleveland, O., June 18.—There is a hitch in the proposed championship contest between Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, and Johnny Kilbane, holder of the featherweight crown. Matt Hinkel, a Cleveland promoter, had scheduled the contest for Canton, O., July 4, but it now appears that another will be substituted.

Fear of public opinion is keeping Leonard out of the match, according to Hinkel. The New Yorker told Hinkel he would not dare to sign for a contest until he had engaged in some branch of the military service.

"I made that promise before I won the title from Welsh, and must keep it," Leonard told me," Hinkel said. "Leonard plans, however, to settle his military plans within a few days and will be able to talk terms."

Fargo, N. D., June 18.—Purses for harness races in the North Dakota racing circuit this season will aggregate $11,200, according to a recent announcement by F. W. McRoberts, secretary of the Interstate Fair association. The season will open at Valley City, N. D., July 4, and closes with the Interstate fair program at Fargo July 23 to 28. The purses are expected to attract some of the best horses in the northwest.

St. Paul Minn., June 18.—Boxing promoters are attempting to bring Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul middleweight, and Al McCoy, claimant of the middleweight championship, together here in an open air contest. A large percentage of the receipts will be donated to the Red Cross.

The promoters plan to stage the contest in Lexington park, the home of the St. Paul baseball club, although owners of the park heretofore have declined to allow boxing contests to be staged there.

Indian Red Dye.
Dogwood was the source of the "Indian red" with which the warriors at one period dyed their eagle feathers and buckskin clothes. They procured the dye from the roots of the tree.

Too Numerous.
The seven ages of man have been expertly defined by Shakespeare but even he, in all his wisdom, would never take such liberties with the ages of woman.

To the Above Named Defendants:
You will please take notice that the above entitled action was filed in the following described real property situated in the county of Burleigh and state of North Dakota to wit: The north half (N 1/2) of the north half (N 1/2) of section twenty-two (22), township one hundred thirty-eight (138) north, of range eighty (80) west of the fifth principal meridian;

In the High street of the city and royal burg of Dundee is an ancient structure, within which the town council still transacts the business of the city. This building was erected some 220 years ago and cost $4,000. In the underground basement is the "condemned cell" seven feet six inches in height and eight feet by seven feet, and without light, ventilation, or sanitary provision of any kind. In this gruesome dungeon the old-time criminal condemned to death awaited his end.

In the upper portion of the building are 22 cells, once used for ordinary prisoners. One of these cells, under the sloping roof of the facade, illustrates the severity of methods of punishment two centuries ago. To a strong iron staple in the center of the apartment the unfortunate prisoner was attached by shackles on his ankles, the floor overhead being so low that he could not stand upright. Only the worst type of criminal was confined in this cell. The ponderous key of the heavy studded door which admits one to the cells has quite a medicinal appearance, being eight inches long, with words of 2 1/2 inches.

AUTO CAPSIZES; LITTLE GIRL IS DEAD FROM HURL

Dickinson, N. D. June 18.—The eight-year-old daughter of D. H. Dahle of this city was killed yesterday when a car in which she was riding, driven by her father, and occupied by other members of the family, turned turtle as an attempt was made to pass another car on a road here. The child lived only a few moments after being taken to a local hospital. Other occupants of the automobile suffered severe bruises.

BISMARCK TAKES TWO FROM FARGO ATHLETIC CLUB

Pulling down two good exhibitions with the Fargo Athletic club Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, the Bismarck champs fell once more into their old-time winning stride Saturday evening's twilight game went to Bismarck by a score of 6 to 1. Sunday afternoon the Fargoites made a better showing, but Bismarck rolled back home with 7 runs to the visitors' 3.

The pleasure of Saturday's contest was marred by Capt. Dolly Elder's bad luck in the last half of the third, when he turned an ankle as he was sliding into second, breaking one of the small bones. He was removed to a local hospital, and will be out of the game several weeks. His loss will be a blow to the team.

Both games were well attended. The crowd was especially large Sunday afternoon, and it was ideal baseball weather.

The score.—

First Game.

Fargo	1	4	5
Bismarck	6	7	2

Second Game.

ZEPPELIN AND CREW ARE LOST

Berlin, June 18.—The Zeppelin Z-48 was lost with all on board in Saturday night's raid on southern England, the admiralty announced today.

Spare Convict's Hands.
Now we know exactly what Justice Darling really thinks of violin players, says the London Globe. One of that tuncful craft appealed against doing hard labor for felony because it might spoil his hands. The court remitted the hard labor and gave reasons.

Justice Darling said that it was expedient for the convict to have a profession in which he could do no harm. If his hands became hard and he could not play the violin, he might again take to practices of the kind of which he had been convicted.

This is quite a new view to take of the uses of the violin. Playing the violin is useful, according to his lordship, because it keeps the performer out of mischief. We wonder if this applies to all music. The vocalist who breaks out in song, we presume, less likely to break into a dwelling house. He who picks the banjo will be kept from picking pockets. And the performer who blows the cornet with feeling will not blow a safe with nitroglycerin.

CABLES LIFT HEAVY GUNS TO MOUNTAIN TOPS

The Italians have encountered most difficulty, in their advance against the Austrians, in moving the heavy guns and other equipment across the Alps. The only way possible is by stringing a cable from one height to another and lifting the guns in parts to the advanced spots. A heavy gun is here shown being transported this way.

Gets $225,000 Heart Balm

New York, June 18.—A verdict of $225,000 in favor of Miss Honora May O'Brien, 28 years old, in her breach of promise suit against John F. Manning, a retired banker and millionaire, 85 years old, was awarded by a state supreme court jury in Long Island City today. The plaintiff said the defendant, the father of grown children, broke his promise to marry her.

TESTED THE DENTIST'S WORK

Khedive of Egypt Had Followed Teeth Pulled So He Could See Whether It Would Hurt.

To illustrate Oriental habits of thought, Lord Cromer tells, in the Quarterly Review, this story of Ismail Pasha, the khedive of Egypt. It once happened that Ismail was suffering from toothache. He sent for a European dentist, who told him that he ought to have the tooth out. Ismail said that he was afraid it would be very painful. He was informed in reply that, if he would allow the dentist to administer laughing gas to him, he would feel nothing. He still doubted, but told the dentist to bring his apparatus to the palace and he would then discuss the question.

The dentist complied, and explained the process to the khedive. Ismail then summoned an attendant and told him to send up the scentry who was at his door.

When the man arrived the khedive ordered him to sit down in a chair, and requested the dentist to take out a tooth on either side of his jaw. Ismail then asked the man whether he had felt anything, and the man told him that he had not. But Ismail was not yet satisfied. He said that the scentry was a young, strong man, and that he would like to see the experiment tried on someone of weaker physique.

Accordingly he summoned a slave girl from the harem and had the dentist extract two of her teeth. Finding that she did not show evidence of extreme suffering, he then consented to have his own tooth out. It is related, although possibly that part of the story is apocryphal, that the dentist then received an order on the Egyptian treasury for one thousand pounds.

ANOTHER STEP IN MYSTERIOUS J. C. R. ENIGMA

Dickinson, June 18.—Mike Chumack, charged with the killing of James H. Caldwell and the latter's wife, as the result of a quarrel on the Caldwell farm over the mysterious "J. C. R.," will probably be placed on trial here late today.

Chumack, who shortly after the killing shot himself, has been recovered sufficiently to allow the trial to proceed. He has pleaded not guilty to the charges, asserting the killing was in self-defense.

Schulz Lands Job.—F. M. Schulz, employed with the railway commission for several years as auditor and elevator accountant, has been appointed chief deputy warehouse inspector under Dr. E. F. Ladd, at a salary of $2,000. Mr. Schulz will have the privilege of naming two assistant deputies, who will co-operate with him and Dr. Ladd in an effort to make the league's grain grading bill workable.

Paid Wages Due 40 Years.
Edwin Fawcett, son of a former paper manufacturer, surprised Cornwall-on-Hudson, New York, by appearing there, distributing to former employees at his father's mill in Moodus, say that had been due them 40 years.

The elder Fawcett's concern got in financial straits after the panic of '73. When the mill closed in 1877 it owed wages to several employees, and Samuel Fawcett told them they would get their pay some day.

His son appeared with a list of former employees, including Charles D. Smith, who was a mere boy when the mill employed him. He received pay, with interest, amounting to $85; his sister received $30 due to their mother, now dead. Others were paid and, in case the employee had died, his next of kin received the money.

Little Things That Count.
Go at your garden work with a will and stick to it all during the summer. You may not raise much, but every little helps. Everything that you raise for yourself lessens the drain on the general supply that must be provided for those who cannot raise anything. If you raise only a peck of potatoes, that means that there will be just one more peck of potatoes in the world than there would have been if you had done nothing, and helps the world situation just so much. This is a day of big things, but it is also a day of small things, because many of them are necessary to make a big thing. Your garden is one of the little things that is to help feed the world, so stick to it and serve both your country and yourself directly and importantly.—Exchange.

Food Bill Debate Opens

Washington, June 18.—Debate on the government's food control bill began in both houses of congress today with its passage of July 1 as the goal, toward which the administration leaders will strive.

The bill, known as the Lever bill, and backed by the entire administration, was taken up in the house today and will be kept constantly before that body until a vote is reached.

"To bring food crooks out into the sunlight, but not to injure honest business," is the aim of the food control bill. Chairman Lever of the agricultural committee declared in opening the debate.

A wave of applause greeted his statement, adding strength to his predictions that the bill will pass the house by a large majority, perhaps by the end of the week.

SUNDAY UNLUCKY DAY FOR AUTOMOBILISTS

Sunday was an unlucky day for Bismarck automobilists.

A car owned by the Schultz garage at Washburn about 9 o'clock last evening struck Chris Delzer, Jr., 10-year-old son of Chris Delzer, as the boy was crossing the street at Fourth and Broadway. The fender cut a gash in the boy's forehead, and he was thrown to the ground. Removed to Cowan's drug store, it was found on dressing the wound that he was not badly injured, and he was able to walk home. Blame is attached to the driver of the car principally because after striking the boy he is said to have put on speed and made no effort to ascertain the extent of his victim's injuries.

Harry Sutton and Ed McCoy were arrested by Traffic Officer D. C. McKenna on a charge of speeding on Seventh street. They appeared before Justice Blackreid this afternoon, pleaded not guilty, and their examination was set for tomorrow forenoon.

The city traffic cop this afternoon procured warrants for three other speeders who could not be apprehended yesterday, but who were identified today by the license numbers on their cars.

REALLY DIDN'T WANT TO BURN TWO GIRLS FOR $500 INSURANCE

State Fire Marshal H. L. Reade Tells of Sensational Incend-iary Case at Fargo

"We really hated to think of burning the girls—we talked it over often and tried to think of some other way, then Elmer went in and sawed the holes, but we felt awfully sorry about the girls."

This is a statement alleged to have been made to state authorities by Mrs. Elmer Rader in, it is alleged, practically confessing that her husband fired the house which they were renting in Fargo and endangered the lives of four people in an effort to collect $500 for which they had their furniture insured.

The girls referred to, stated Fire Marshal Reade this morning on his return from the Gate City, were two roomers at the Rader home. In addition a man and his wife had rooms there. But for the fact that one of the girls was awakened in the middle of the night by the smell of smoke, everyone in the house might have perished.

State Fire Marshal Reade and Fire Chief Sutherland of Fargo prosecuted the case, and have had Rader bound over to the next term of district court to answer to a charge of arson in the first degree.

Tried to Cover Tracks.

The Raders the evening of the fire are said to have left their home, after carefully locking the rooms which they occupied, and to have gone to Mapleton, where they engaged a room for the night, and later left for the river with the avowed intention of doing some fishing. Mrs. Rader with her baby returned afterwards to the hotel and retired. She swears that Rader shared the room with her that night. Agent Michaelson of the Northern Pacific, in charge of the Mapleton station, however, told of walking home from a Shriners meeting at Fargo the morning of the fire and of being overtaken by Rader, also walking from the direction of Fargo, while the former was resting at Haggart. Michaelson says that he and Rader finished the journey to Mapleton on a handcar. Confronted with this evidence, Rader confessed that he had returned to Fargo in the night, but declared it was for the purpose of watching his premises, as he had reason to fear trouble.

When an investigation was made at the Rader home it was found that five different "plants" had been laid, floors had been bored through, and oil-soaked fuel deposited at different points. The Raders are said to have recently had transferred to their own name a $500 insurance policy covering about $200 worth of household goods which they had bought from an installment house, to whom the policy formerly ran.
